FORMER PLAYERS SUE NFL, ALLEGING CONCEALED RISK OF BRAIN INJURIES

Reuters

Some 2,000 former NFL players sued the league Thursday, alleging it deliberately and fraudulently concealed the risk of brain injury from players while marketing the ferocity and brutality of the game.

The master complaint joined more than 80 lawsuits previously filed by former players on a topic that has generated increasing concern following the suicides of former players such as Junior Seau in May, Ray Easterling in April and Dave Duerson last year.

Duerson, a former Bears star, killed himself with a gunshot to the chest after complaining of headaches, blurred vision and memory loss, leaving a note with the request: "Please, see that my brain is given to the NFL's brain bank."

The suit seeks unspecified financial compensation for fraud, misrepresentation and negligence against the NFL, a $9 billion annual industry that is the pinnacle for a sport also played at hundreds of colleges, thousands of high schools and in youth leagues across the U.S.

The lawsuit, which remains open for other players to join, also names as a defendant official NFL helmet maker Riddell and affiliated companies including parent corporation Easton-Bell Sports.

"The NFL and its agents continued to market, as it had in the past, the ferocity and brutality of the sport that, in part, gives rise to the latent and debilitating neuro-cognitive conditions and injuries from which plaintiffs suffer," said the 86-page lawsuit filed at U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Even after the NFL formed its own Mild Traumatic Brain Injury Committee in 1994 to study the impact of concussions and sub-concussive injuries on players, the league failed to inform players of the risks, the suit claims.

"For 16 years, the NFL actively and continuously denied any link between MTBI ... and the neurological symptoms and problems [such as headaches, dizziness, loss of memory, dementia and ALS] from which they [players] now suffer," the suit said.

The NFL labeled the suit groundless and called attention to "numerous extensive benefits programs" for former players, including one that has disbursed $17.5 million to more than 200 players and their families.

2 SIDES TO THE ARGUMENT

“I firmly believe the NFL could have and should have done more to protect Ray. That’s why I am seeking to hold the NFL accountable.”

—Mary Ann Easterling, widow of former Atlanta Falcons safety Ray Easterling, who committed suicide in April after years suffering from dementia

“The NFL has long made player safety a priority and continues to do so. Any allegation that the NFL sought to mislead players has no merit.”

—NFL statement

Haaaave you met Chicago?

Hector Luis Alamo Jr.

redeye@tribune.com

Summer's here! OK, sure, it's not official till June 20, but forget what the calendar says. Open the windows. Go outside. Summer is definitely here.

With all those saved-up vacation days begging to be used, now's the perfect time to start making plans for the three-month stretch of warm weather. Tropical climes are beckoning. California,

Florida, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, the Bahamas—you can already see yourself sprawled underneath an oversized parasol, sucking down your umpteenth pina colada while your eyes search desperately for the server so he can bring you another.

Flying south for the summer like some misdirected bird is a Chicago ritual, but it doesn't have to be. Chicago's a big town—some might say it's too big—and no matter how long you've lived here, there's always room to see more.

It's usually our routines that keep us from exploring the city we love. When most Chicagoans claim to know the city "like the back of my hand," they usually mean the four or five neighborhoods they've actually stopped in. I mean, I've been to Bridgeport, but I haven't actually been to Bridgeport. (It's definitely on my list of places to explore this summer.)

I haven't eaten "The Elvis" at Hot Doug's in Avondale or the smoked trout at Calumet Fisheries near the Indiana state line. I visit the Puerto Rican Pride Festival in Humboldt Park every June, but I've never been to the parade downtown. There's the Air & Water Show in August that I've never seen, nor have I strolled the grounds of Morton Arboretum. I've been to Lolla but never Blues Fest. Already in 2012, I've cheered for the home team at two Bulls games (once in the playoffs), a Cubs game and a Sox game, but I've never been to Toyota Park to root for the Fire.

So, how does a lifelong Chicagoan who hasn't seen much of Chicago go about correcting that?

The fastest and easiest way to stay in the know on things to do and places to see in the city is by taking to the Internet—that is why Al Gore invented it in the first place. Sites such as explorechicago.org and metromix.com should be added to your "Summer Fun" bookmark list, if they aren't already.

Twitter and Facebook also are essential in carrying out a successful summertime assault on the city. You gotta spread those social media tentacles far and wide. (I try to follow every major publication or organization in the city and have them listed under my "Chicago news" feed.)

The most important part of making the most of Chicago this summer is to actually get started. Three months of urban excitement and adventure is usually the result of a snowball effect—you gotta get out there to stay out there.

I don't know why I've left so many things in Chicago undone, so many places unvisited, so many experiences unexperienced. I guess I've taken the city for granted, assuming it and all its wonders will always be there whenever I decide to take them in.

But not this time.

Summer's here, and Staycation 2012 has officially begun. Who's with me?

Tea party for dogs doubles as anti-cruelty fundraiser

Chicago Tribune

Ties and tails were everywhere Thursday at the Palmer House Hilton. Dog tails, that is.

People paraded their pooches through the hotel's opulent Empire Room during the Palmer House's fifth annual Doggie Tea Party, an opportunity for humans to mingle and sip champagne while their pets dined on gourmet, chef-prepared food.

For the first time, the hotel partnered with an outside organization, the Anti-Cruelty Society, to host the event, hotel general manager Dean Lane said.

Guests paid $30 per ticket to bring their canine companions to the event, and all proceeds benefited the Anti-Cruelty Society.

Photographers snapped portraits of dogs and their owners. Servers with trays of champagne for humans made the rounds while dogs roamed freely—although a few remained on leashes. The animals greeted one another with sniffs of curiosity before sauntering up to a long, low table set with dishes and party hats.

Chef Joseph Giannini of Urban Out Sitters, a West Loop doggie day care, prepared a five-course lunch for the dogs that included lobster sushi, chicken pie and dog-friendly desserts.

The food was prepared using human-grade products, Giannini said, joking that humans might be tempted by the dishes.

"I hate to say it, but the food they're going to eat today is probably healthier than some of the things we eat at home," he said.

Although humans and canines alike lived it up in high-class fashion, the guest of honor was Wilma, a chocolate Labrador who last month became Chicago's first Dog of Distinction in a contest City Clerk Susana Mendoza's office started to encourage dog registration.

Totally nailed it!

Columbia College grad puts celebrity at your fingertips

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Ever want your dream guy at your fingertips? Just within your grasp? Eating out of your hand?

Well, now you can make that happen. That is, if Ryan Gosling, Robert Pattinson, Zac Efron, Joe Jonas and Pharrell are on your list.

They made the cut on the list of hot and cool guys Chrissy Mahlmeister came up with when she thought of putting faces on fingernails. It all started with Ryan Gosling. Thinking about Gosling. Joking about Gosling.

"Oh, my God, wouldn't it be amazing to have Ryan Gosling on your fingers?" the 25-year-old Columbia College Chicago grad recalls thinking. "What if I put my top five hottest dudes and call it Hot Man-icure."

So she did, with the help of her college boyfriend, a graphic artist who designed illustrations of the celebrities. The nail designs, which come in a package of 20, are sold for $18 online at shop.radnails.com.

"People are flipping out over these nails. It makes me so happy. I'm glad people have a sense of humor," she said.

The designs, which are printed in suburban Geneva, stick to fingernails using an adhesive. A clear top coat of polish can be applied and—voilà!—hot guys on nails for three to seven days.

"I'm obsessed with nail art," said Mahlmeister, who now lives in Brooklyn and works as MTV Style assistant editor.

She worked on a DIY nail art prom guide last year, met with nail artists, blogs about nail art and often stops in Sephora in Times Square to check out their nail supplies.

"Whenever I come and visit Chicago, people flip out when they see my nails. They think it's really amazing," Mahlmeister said.

Kanye's new kicks landing in Chicago

By Taylor Ervin

FOR REDEYE

Sneakerheads rejoice. The highly anticipated Air Yeezy 2, a Nike sneaker designed by Kanye West, officially drops Saturday, but only a handful of the shoes will be released for public consumption at select stores, including two in Chicago.

Chicago streetwear boutiques RSVP Gallery (1753 N. Damen Ave.) in Wicker Park and Succexz (1329 S. Michigan Ave.) in the South Loop will have a limited number of the Kanye-designed high tops available Saturday via silent auction. A third store, Saint Alfred (1531 N. Milwaukee Ave.), also in Wicker Park, may be getting its hands on the shoes soon.

Store representative Austin Neely said RSVP Gallery wanted to avoid the chaos of a huge crowd and that the business was not interested in handling overwhelming lines.

Footwear enthusiasts and Kanye fans began camping out along Damen Avenue in front of RSVP Gallery on Sunday for a chance to be first in line for the new shoes, but they were all sent home Tuesday after the store announced that it would conduct a silent auction.

"We are excited to be part of the release," Neely said. "[RSVP Gallery] basically got the shoes because our store owner has [a unique relationship with] Nike."

Managers at Succexz came to a similar conclusion. Bidding at both stores will begin at the retail price of $245, but the final bid is expected to soar much higher. A portion of the proceeds from RSVP's auction will go to Children's Memorial Hospital.

The Air Yeezy 2 is a follow-up to the original Air Yeezy model, which was released in spring 2009. Neely says the updated version is a well-designed shoe, but the most interesting part is the glow-in-the-dark soles.

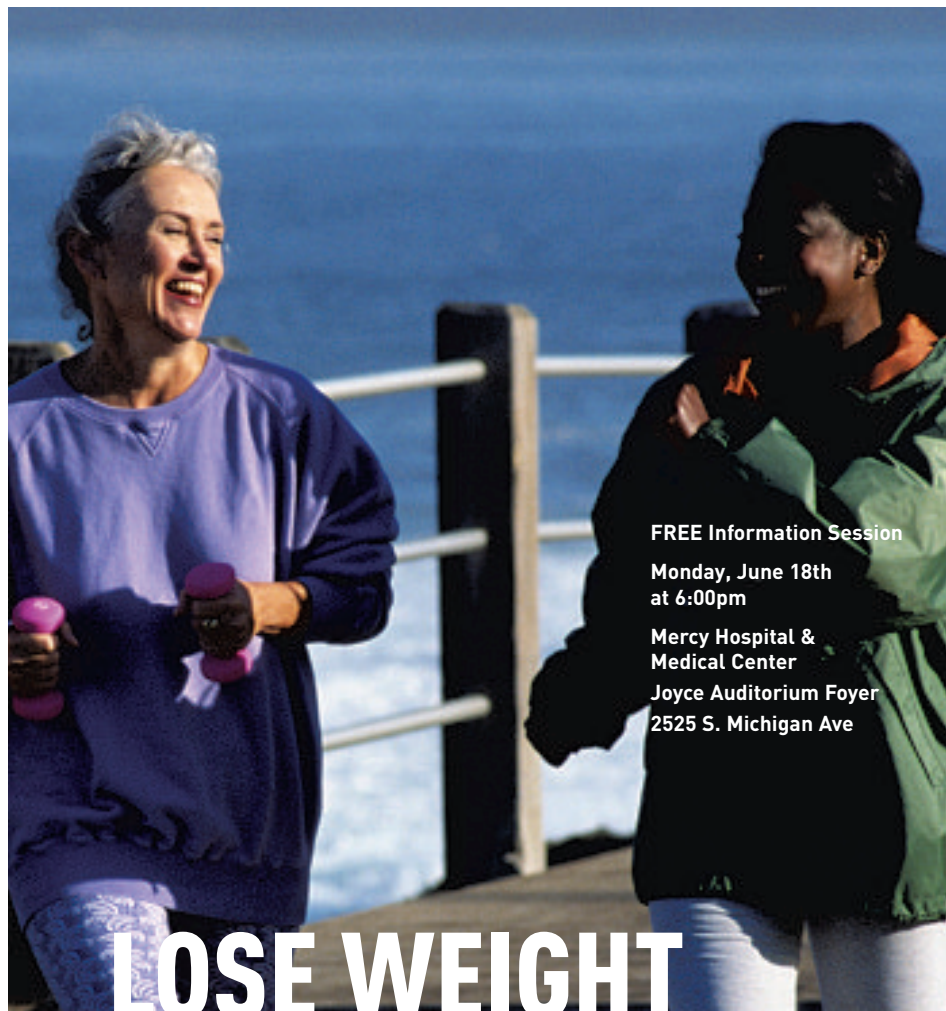

RSVP Gallery also will raffle off a pair of the new Kanye kicks. Anyone who purchases more than $200 worth of merchandise this week will be entered for a chance to win.

TAYLOR ERVIN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Ex-president popularity: Clinton trumps Dubya

4 WASHINGTON More than three years after leaving office, former President George W. Bush remains unpopular with the public, according to a new national poll.

A CNN/ORC International poll also indicates that two-thirds of Americans have a positive view of Bush's predecessor, former President Bill Clinton.

According to the poll, released Thursday, 43 percent of people questioned had a favorable opinion of Bush, with 54 percent saying they had an unfavorable view of the former president. Bush's 43 percent favorable rating is the same as it was in 2010 in CNN polling, but is up from his mid-30s favorable rating during 2009, his first year out of the White House.

"Don't be surprised if the Obama campaign mentions the name of George W. Bush at every opportunity, and don't be surprised if that strategy works," CNN polling director Keating Holland said. "And the mention of Bush's name appears to prompt at least a few people to take a more positive view of their current financial situation."

Bush's father, George H.W. Bush, gets a 59 percent rating, with 34 percent saying they have an unfavorable view of the first President Bush, who was elected to the White House in 1988. Bush was defeated in his bid for a second term by Bill Clinton, who has a 66 percent favorable rating in the poll. Only 31 percent say they hold an unfavorable rating of Clinton.

BETTER OFF NOW?

When asked in the survey whether they are better or worse off than they were four years ago, Americans are split, 44 percent to 43 percent. But when asked whether they are better or worse off than they were four years ago "when Bush was president," a small gap opens—47 percent say they are better off compared with 41 percent who say they are worse off.

Jimmy Carter, the one-term Democratic president who was elected in 1976 and defeated in 1980, is viewed favorably by 54 percent of the public, with just 3 in 10 seeing him in a negative light.

5 Intel leaks spark probe

Congressional leaders agreed Thursday on the need for a full investigation of what one called a recent "cascade" of leaked classified information but differed on exactly how the inquiry should be conducted. The investigation involves leaks about a cyberwarfare program against Iran and other intelligence matters.

6 Proposal goes very wrong

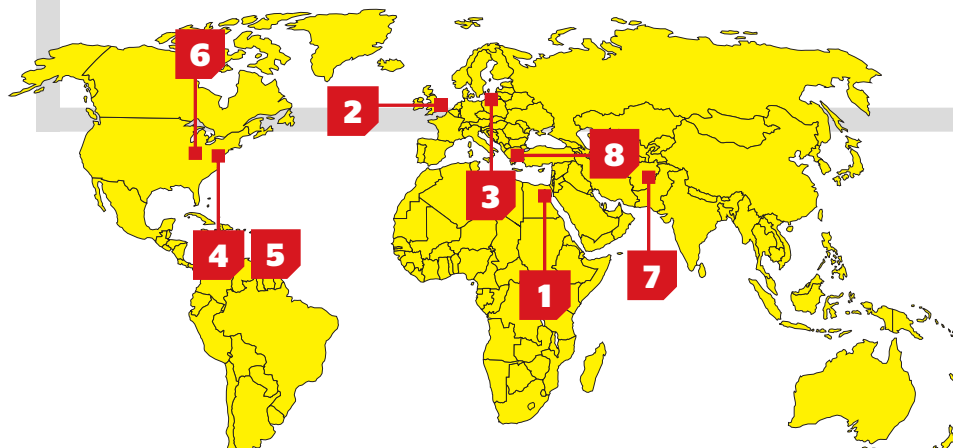

A marriage proposal in Sellersburg, Ind., concluded with a shock late Wednesday, when the hot air balloon carrying the future bride and groom hit a power line and knocked the pilot unconscious, a sheriff's office spokesman said. The pilot and bride-to-be were treated on the scene for burns.

7 U.S. warns Pakistan

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta on Thursday said the U.S. was reaching the limits of its patience with Pakistan because of the safe havens the country offered to insurgents in neighboring Afghanistan. He was speaking in the Afghan capital, Kabul, where he held talks with military leaders amid rising violence in the war against the Taliban.

8 Politician slaps woman on TV

The Greek prosecutor's office issued a warrant Thursday for the arrest of a well-known politician videotaped throwing a glass of water at a colleague and slapping another. Ilias Kasidiaris of Greece's far-right party Golden Dawn caused a national uproar with his actions during a popular morning TV talk show.

First-class tips for vacations

YOUNG MONEY

Megan Crepeau

 @redeye@
tribune.com

Ladies and gentlemen, you deserve a vacation. Can't you hear the waves lapping at the beach? Can't you hear the ice cream truck? Can't you hear your head slamming against your desk as you try to find a plane ticket without going broke? It's OK. It's OK. Here, have a Popsicle and write down these three handy tips:

1) Timing. 2) Timing. 3) Timing.

Most experts say the best time to buy a plane ticket is on a weekday, especially Tuesday or Wednesday. If that works for you, great! But you should really still do your own homework.

Bing.com's travel section will compare airfares for you side by side and will even send you alerts when the price goes up or down. It's also got a fancy price predictor based on past fluctuations. Hurrah, Bing is good for something! But don't rely on it to do all your work for you. Start a month or two before you plan to fly, and track prices obsessively from there. When you find something reasonable, you pounce.

Another huge factor in the ticket price is when you plan to fly. Early and very late flights tend to be the cheapest, for obvious reasons, but the biggest factor is the day of the week and the time of the month. Everyone flies on holidays, so airlines can jack up the prices for Labor Day weekend or Fourth of July. Don't fly then if you can help it. The same principle applies to weekend flights—everyone wants to fly out Friday and get back Sunday. Make it a Thursday-to-Monday trip instead and your wallet might thank you.

This last piece of advice is for our free-spirit friends. If you haven't got the time to constantly check travel sites, there's still a chance you'll survive without the airlines picking your pocket. You've got to get those last-minute deals, baby! Try Twitter @jetbluecheeps or sign up for the Southwest Click n' Save email. There are catches, of course. They have some killer fares, but they don't offer much flexibility as far as where to fly or when to buy (some of these sales last only for a few hours).

Is it creepy to message
my crush on Facebook?Anna Pulleyredeye@
tribune.com

Dear Anna:

I have met this girl a couple times and I find her to be very cute. The last time I ran into the girl, I got tongue-tied and didn't want to make myself look dumb. Now I was thinking that I could go and search for her on Facebook and see if I can do introduce myself that way. What do you think?

Or should I go about it in another way?

—Lost and confused

It's not the most direct route, but Facebook is a perfectly acceptable gateway to your crush's heart. I know because I've done it myself a few times. And once on Twitter!

I don't really know the circumstances of your crush, but depending on how well you know this girl and how often you run into her, messaging her could be perceived as somewhat creepy. For instance, if you run into her often and she never remembers who you are, or you always sputter incoherently when you do, then not even the wittiest Facebook message will probably lead to nuptial bliss. If you have mutual friends, however, then use that as your "in." If you have a mutual anything, really—a mutual class, a mutual neighborhood you live in, a mutual coffee shop you frequent, a mutual miniature horse fascination. Whatever. If you have something in common, you're much less likely to skeeve a somewhat-stranger out.

SOME FIRST-MESSAGE
TOPICS TO AVOID

- » Charles Manson
- » Love and/or your future progeny
- » How you're 30 and have never been in a relationship

- » Exes
- » Politics (unless you both work in that field)
- » Religion
- » How great she looks in that bikini picture from 2007 (or anything else that would indicate you've trolled her public images on FB)

SAFE TOPICS

- » Pop culture references
- » The latest weird/annoying thing Facebook has done
- » Mutual friends/interests
- » Oprah
- » The weather
- » The CTA

Make sure your message is short, friendly and casual. Don't apologize or call attention to your possible creep-deepery. Also, when I say short, I don't mean, "Hey gurl, wuzzup?" and that's it. Give her a reason to respond. Ask a benign, non-generic question, again, possibly relating to a common interest you share, or even something that clarifies the mumbling when you ran into her last time. If you're in any way charming or witty, use that in your favor, but if not, no worries. Just be yourself and be polite. If she's worth her weight in pixels, she'll write back to you. If she doesn't, write her off, and move your crushing elsewhere.

Houston has liftoff

The life of a kicker in the AFL leaves little margin for error

By Matt Lindner

FOR REDEYE

He's been on the job for only a few weeks, but Chicago Rush kicker Joe Houston seems to grasp that the task at hand is unlike any he's tackled.

"I'm not used to having to dodge scoreboards when I kick off," Houston said with a laugh.

It's one of many nuances the former USC kicker has had to embrace as part of his new gig for the Arena Football League team as he prepares for his third game with the Rush (7-4) on Saturday in Salt Lake City.

An AFL field is only 50 yards long and the goal posts are 9 feet wide by 15 feet high, as opposed to 18 by 10 outdoors, meaning kickers have much less margin for error. Houston said he prepared for this the past two years by aiming at something even smaller in practice.

"I just aim at a light pole in the outfield of the baseball field [at USC]," he said. "I figure if I can hit a light pole, I can get better results when I'm kicking at the uprights. If you aim small, you miss small."

There's also the issue of space—or more specifically, the lack thereof. While he could practice kicks into a net on the sidelines in the outdoor game, he doesn't have that kind of luxury indoors because there's simply no room.

"You really have to be focused because unless it's pregame or halftime, every time you strike a ball, it's for points," Houston said.

That includes on kickoffs. In those instances, Houston becomes sort of a pinball wizard, hoping to play just the right angle to put his team on the board. Unlike in the outdoor game, there are rebound nets framed with iron on either side of the goal posts in the AFL. Balls that bounce off the nets or the iron are live and can be recovered by either squad.

"If I kick off and I hit the upright, the ball bounces in funny ways and we can essentially steal seven points just by kicking off," Houston said.

He's also well aware of the fact that he's on a short leash. The man he replaced, Orland Park's Mike Salerno, was released after having a rough game last month against Arizona and remains unemployed despite still ranking among the league leaders in every kicking category.

"All I've got to think about is my next attempt," Houston said. "I've gotta go 1-for-1."

He's off to a great start. In his first game for the Rush, an 84-77 loss to San Jose on May 26, Houston tied a team record by hitting all 11 extra points he attempted. In his second game, on Sunday against Spokane, he hit all 10 extra points he tried as well as 31-yard field goal.

"[The game against San Jose] was my first taste at a game and I can't ever remember trading touchdowns like that at USC," he said. "Although it's football, it's a different game. I don't think I could ever kick 11 PATs [points after touchdown] in the [Los Angeles] Coliseum."

Houston, a California native who has been in Chicago for only a few weeks, said the team's practice facility isn't exactly designed with a kicker in mind.

"It's kind of difficult because the roof is extremely low at our practice facility," Houston said. "I can't practice kickoffs there. Either I have to drive to a local high school to practice kickoffs or I have to do it in the field behind my apartment."

Of course, there's the issue of finding a way to make ends meet.

You probably won't see Bears kicker Robbie Gould looking for a job to supplement his income. But at a salary of only $400 a game, AFL players aren't exactly in the upper tax bracket.

"I'm actually on the look for jobs because while we don't have a lot of downtime, our afternoons are free," he said. "The game pay isn't what you come here to play for. You come here to compete and win a championship."

FOR REDEYE

Getting his kicks

By Matt Lindner

FOR REDEYE

So how hard is it to split the uprights, especially if you’ve never kicked a football?

Former Rush kicker Mike Salerno gave me a free lesson from the 10-yard line, where Arena Football League kickers attempt extra points, at Allstate Arena last month.

“It looks pretty daunting,” he said with a laugh as I silently thanked the gods that the only people around to witness this debacle were a RedEye photographer and a Rush public relations rep.

Salerno’s instructions were simple: “Be relaxed and keep your weight forward moving towards the ball.”

I relaxed, kept my weight forward, took a couple of steps ... and proceeded to miss wide left by about 30 feet.

“You see where your chest went on that? That’s why I tell you you’ve gotta keep your weight moving forward,” Salerno said. He started to sound like my father despite being four years younger than I am.

Three attempts later, his lessons bore fruit. The ball fluttered off my foot and sailed just over the crossbar. I ran around the field celebrating like I actually accomplished something as Salerno looked on, laughing.

“If you’re just starting out, don’t get too technical with it,” he said. “Kicking is so fundamental. It’s like golf where if you miss a ball by half an inch, you’re gonna be missing the kick.” MATT LINDNER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

1 The Cubs expect to be active at the trade deadline. Who goes?	Ryan Dempster, of course. Geovany Soto, maybe. Alfonso Soriano. If there is a God.	Gotta be Alfonso Sorriano.	No one. Finally, the Cubs are active.	In an upset no one sees coming. Paul Konerko.	Everyone.
2 What do you think of the Bears' plan to use Henry Melton as the new "Fridge"?	Sure, whatever. Just keep Cutler healthy.	You can't be a "Fridge" named Melton—you'd defrost.	Don't know. When I get a fridge, I don't want anything a Mellon.	As long as he gives frost-related quips, I'm in. CHILL OUT, DETROIT.	He was a running back for the 2005 national champion Longhorns. Can't hurt.
3 Why wouldn't Phil Jackson want to coach the Orlando Magic?	The owner's daughter isn't hot enough.	Ex-coach Stan Van Gundy looks too close to Ron Jeremy to be comfortable sitting in his old chair.	He knows Disney World doesn't need a "Lord of the Rings" attraction.	Ugly incident with Goofy back in 1982. He doesn't ever talk about it.	Working for Dwight Howard would be a pain in the ass.
4 How would you deal with cellphones at golf tournaments?	All ringtones must be set to "FORE!"	Put them on a tee and dial fooooooooooooooooooooo!	The 'hole with the fewest keystrokes wins.	Terry Tate: Fairway Linebacker. I'd watch the hell outta that!	Turn 'em off, please. We're trying to run an elitist, sexist, racist and classist sport here!
5 What would an NFL game be like with replacement referees?	Players would have the option to receive replacement concussions.	Like an NBA game with regular referees.	I look forward to star wars: the umpire strikes back.	Like 5on5 without Brian Moore. Thank you for everything, Brian.	Like an MLB game with its current umpires.

Cubs should overthrow Castro

SACKED AGAIN

Bag Boy

» redeyesports @tribune.com

Because they're un-watchable, I ignore the Cubs. However, Theo Epstein could use a word of advice.

Theo, you need to launch Starlin Castro immediately, and you know why. Simply: He was picked before you got here. That means he's tainted, damaged goods, a heartbreaker. If you want to rebuild this thing, tear it all the way down and nuke it good.

As Ronald Reagan would say: "Mr. Epstein, tear down this franchise!"

Put another way, trust yourself more than you trust the people who brought you: Corey Patterson, Felix Pie, Rich Hill, Bobby Hill, Mike Harkey, Gary Scott, Derrick May, Dwight Smith, Earl Cunningham, Ty Griffin, Lance Dickson, Brooks Kieschnick, Kevin Orie, Ben Christensen, Tyler Colvin and Josh Vitters.

Don't recognize anyone? Oh. They're all highly touted Cub prospects who never amounted to diddly.

Here's a clue: Your best prospect, Anthony Rizzo, was brought over with Jed Hoyer from San Diego.

Castro might be a good player except that he has the attention span of a 6-year-old. Derek Jeter doesn't have that problem.

It will be painful, but it has to be done. They'll hate you now, love you later. You know this.

And the Sox aren't much better right now. Sorry, but don't get cozy with first place. It's a mirage.

Um, we basically have ... two starters? Maybe three if Johnny Danks gets good again. But right now, Philip Humber and Gavin Floyd need to hit the bricks. Both are terrible and won't last the year. Humber, thanks for the perfect game. Should have traded him on the spot. Gavin, you never even had a feel-good moment.

I'll take my chances with Jose Quintana and whoever else we can find. Otherwise, we're in trouble. And Paulie Konerko's wrist? He had a "procedure." No one's talking! What's up? The Bag needs info.

Castro
JOSE M. OSORIO/

Since it's football season anyway, a quick headline: "Bears add scouts, beef up personnel department." That's why we're just now getting big-time receivers and toys everyone else already has. I feel like the last house in the 'hood to get cable. We'll take it!

ALIEN (RE)BIRTH

SCOTT TURNS BACK THE CLOCK FOR SPELLBINDING 'PROMETHEUS'

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

Runner") returns to the director's chair, where he was when the "Alien" series began in 1979.

Finally confirmed as a prequel to "Alien,"

So beautiful it belongs on the Maxim Hot 100, "Prometheus" arrives in the wake of an awesome-looking trailer to disintegrate the existence of the "Alien vs. Predator" movies and revive the world's excitement about cinema's second-most famous E.T. Also helpful: Ridley Scott ("Blade

"Prometheus" concerns itself with where it all began on a much bigger level. A few years after Elizabeth Shaw (Noomi Rapace) and her boyfriend, Charlie (Logan Marshall-Green), find cave drawings suggesting an alien foundation to the human race, the "scientific exploratory vessel" Prometheus arrives on a foreign planet in 2093, hoping to answer questions the species has asked since the creation of the words "who," "how" and "why."

Meredith Vickers (Charlize Theron) commands the ship and insists her companions not make contact with anyone or anything. Captain Janek (Idris Elba) merely steers the ship; he doesn't want any more information and he's the only one who can get everyone home. Helpful, blond David (Michael Fassbender) seems like one of the most trustworthy people on the ship, except he's not people: He's an android who spent the two-plus years of travel time (during which everyone else slept in stasis) learning ancient languages, playing basketball and watching "Lawrence of Arabia" over and over.

Fassbender reportedly watched "Arabia" constantly for the part, and many will want to put "Prometheus" on a loop to dissect the script from "Lost" creator Damon Lindelof and Jon Spaihts, which establishes a thoughtful, studied pace that creeps instead of screams. If "Prometheus" intrigues more than it rivets, the film still deserves credit for (very directly) articulating so many enormous concepts about humanity in a movie packed with astonishing imagery.

Scott has created 3-D landscapes and creatures that look exactly as real as they must to rise above all the other expensive special effects extravaganzas. I won't reveal anything specific about them because my inbox can't hold all the angry emails I'd receive for giving something away about this highly anticipated, largely satisfying thriller.

Rapace and especially the unsettling Fassbender are fantastic, and "Prometheus" skirts narrative similarities to "Jurassic Park" by examining our inability to resist questions for which we might not be prepared for the answers. (David, quoting Peter O'Toole's T.E. Lawrence, advises quieting the voices inside: "The trick ... is not minding that it hurts.") The movie mournfully recognizes the devastation that unknowing beings bring on themselves with curiosity that's uncommon for big-budget summer spectacles.

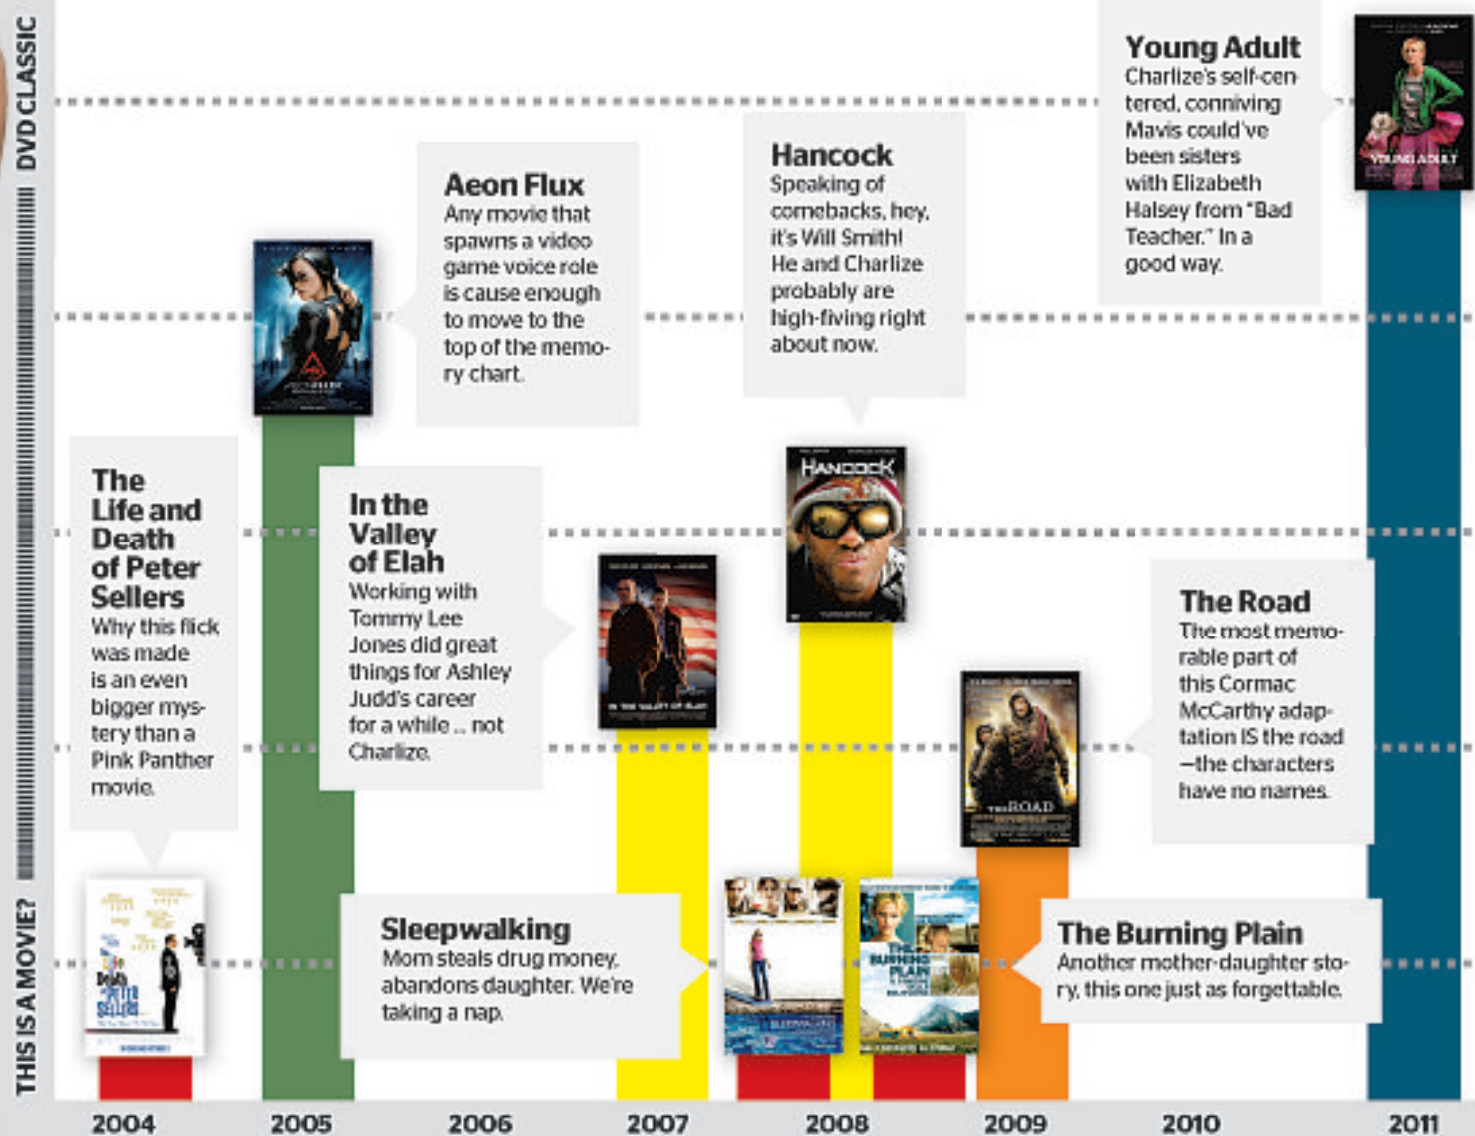

It's a spellbinding take on the universe's domino effect, maintained by ideas and underlined by the never-ending search to find the one that started it all.

CHARLIZE IN CHARGE

Now that Charlize Theron has scared up a $56.2 million opening weekend for "Snow White and the Huntsman," the reigning queen of the movies is ready to top the box office again this weekend with "Prometheus." Seems like she's getting way more work than she has in a while, right? Not so much—everyone's new favorite Evil Queen and space commander actually has been working steadily since her Oscar win for 2003's "Monster." We graphed some of Charlize's more—and less—memorable movies to see what she's been up to. DANA MORAN, REDEYE

A LOOK BACK AT 'ALIEN' MOVIES

The original "Alien" begat three sequels—and we'll just forget about those two "Alien vs. Predator" mashups. Here's a quick rundown of the four "Alien"-only flicks. NEWSDAY

Alien

Director: Ridley Scott
Cast: Sigourney Weaver, Tom Skerritt, John Hurt, Yaphet Kotto, Ian Holm, Harry Dean Stanton, Veronica Cartwright

Box-office gross (all grosses in 2012 dollars): $279 million
Plot: The crew of a mining ship finds a creature that attaches itself to humans. The ship's corporate owners want it returned to Earth to be studied, but the alien kills everyone onboard except Warrant Officer Ripley (Weaver), who kills the monster.

Aliens

Director: James Cameron
Cast: Weaver, Michael Biehn, Lance Henriksen, Paul Reiser, Carrie Henn
Box-office gross: $177 million

Plot: Ripley and a squad of Marines head to a space colony that has lost contact with Earth. They discover an abandoned site, with only one human survivor, a girl named Newt—and a nest of alien creatures. Mayhem ensues, with Ripley, Newt and an android the only survivors.

Director: David Fincher
Cast: Weaver, Charles S. Dutton, Charles Dance, Pete Postlethwaite
Box-office gross: $91 million

Plot: The escape vehicle from "Aliens" crash-lands on a male prison planet. An alien stowaway creates havoc, leaving Ripley to lead the fight against it. She discovers that the embryo of an alien queen is growing inside her and commits suicide to stop the corporation from taking the alien.

Alien: Resurrection

1997

Director: Jean-Pierre Jeunet
Cast: Weaver, Winona Ryder, Ron Perlman, Brad Dourif
Box-office gross: $69 million

Plot: Set 200 years after "Alien 3," Ripley has been cloned and an alien queen is removed from her. The military wants to breed aliens using kidnapped human hosts. But the aliens escape, so Ripley tries to destroy the ship before it reaches Earth.

Logan Marshall-Green (from left), Noomi Rapace and Michael Fassbender

'Tattoo' actress at heart of 'Prometheus'

Los Angeles Times

In Noomi Rapace's screen test for the lead role in "Prometheus," the actress portrayed a young scientist trying to persuade a giant corporation to invest billions of dollars on a trip to another planet in hopes of unraveling the origins of human life. The company has little more than her passion and intensity as its guide in determining whether to fund the venture.

The situation was strikingly similar to what director Ridley Scott was asking 20th Century Fox to do with Rapace: take a flier on an unknown. The 32-year-old Swedish actress had achieved worldwide fame thanks to her portrayal of cyber-sleuth Lisbeth Salander in the three original "Girl With the Dragon Tattoo" films.

Still, her English was shaky and her first studio film, "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows," was not set to hit theaters for another year, so she still was largely unfamiliar to mainstream American audiences. Casting her as lead character Elizabeth Shaw alongside Michael Fassbender and Charlize Theron in a big-budget potential summer blockbuster wasn't a slam dunk.

Except to Scott, who was smitten with the actress from the first time he met her and worked closely with her on mastering the test.

"Ridley worked with me as if it was a real scene," Rapace said. "He kept saying to me, 'You don't have to prove anything; this is not a test for me. You're my girl. We're just doing this together so they can see that you can act in English.'"

"Prometheus," which arrives in theaters Friday, is not a traditional prequel to the "Alien" series. According to Scott, the two share the same DNA, meaning that in the new film, similarly bad things happen on another planet—as they did in Scott's 1979 original. But Rapace is not a mere replacement of Weaver's Ripley. Rather, she is a God-fearing scientist who hopes her studies lead her to uncover the meaning of life.

"What stuck in my mind was in none of the four 'Alien' movies, no one ever asked the question, the big question of who's the big guy," said Scott, who directed only the first of the four "Alien" films. "When the franchise finally ended, I thought, 'you can't go again because the alien himself is too familiar now, it's no longer frightening.' You have to reinvent the wheel and I kept thinking about the big guy."

To do that, he needed to find his Elizabeth Shaw—someone who could endure challenges such as fighting off a batch of tentacled monsters and enduring a horrific self-mutilation. One night on TV, he caught Rapace's performance in "Dragon Tattoo."

"I was taken and curious," Scott said. "Who was this punk and which alleyway did [the director] get her?"

He watched the film two more times before meeting with Rapace; when they finally came face to face, he was surprised. "Into my office walked this beautiful young woman, and I found myself dealing with a real actress," he recalled. "She's special, indestructible."

For Rapace, "Prometheus" seems likely to open new acting avenues. Her next few roles, though, don't involve any spaceships or aliens. She's in Philadelphia working on a crime thriller, "Dead Man Down," with Colin Farrell and directed by her "Dragon Tattoo" helmer Niels Arden Oplev. She's also in Brian De Palma's upcoming revenge tale "Passion."

"I pre-judged Hollywood. I thought it was a little more hollow and a little bit more superficial," she said. "I didn't know there were so many artists: directors, producers and actors living there with the same passion as I have."

Elizabeth Olsen (left) as Zoe and Jane Fonda as Grace in "Peace, Love and Misunderstanding"

Mind over matters

Ah, there's nothing like a hookah session with Grandma.

Zoe (Elizabeth Olsen) and Jake (Nat Wolff) learn that from experience when they spend time in Woodstock with their mom, Diane (Catherine Keener), and her mom, Grace (Jane Fonda), who paints a naked dude named Jazz and refuses to name the chickens that roam around everywhere because "They're nature's children, not ours." As Diane takes time away from the husband (Kyle MacLachlan) who just asked for a divorce, she and her kids encounter new romantic possibilities (with folks including Jeffrey Dean Morgan and Chace Crawford) that teach them all to lighten up.

There's a difference between platitudes and poetry, though—something "PLAM" should know, considering how Zoe marvels

Peace, Love and Misunderstanding

that a butcher (Crawford) could also memorize Whitman—and this featherweight dramedy from director Bruce Beresford ("Driving Miss Daisy") engages largely in wretched lines like, "Did the patron saint of uptight just tell me to calm down?"

Though inferior to the easygoing charms of Ang Lee's "Taking Woodstock," the movie's low-key vibe calms like a mild breeze, which is more than can be said for the documentary Jake makes by invading his family's privacy and using invasive footage without their consent. That doesn't quite mesh with simplistic notions of forgiveness that boil down to, "Everybody's trying, and if you want to be happy, be happy."

Everyone wants to take a load off, Annie, but it's easier said than done.

games

Future of gaming is in your hands

CNN
As mobile games migrate to powerful smartphones and tablets that are becoming direct competition to portable gaming devices such as the Nintendo 3DS and PS Vita, the E3 convention in L.A. this week became a prime stage for game publishers to showcase new titles.

Mobile games are becoming a bigger part of many game makers' plans as gamers will soon be able to access game franchises through multiple screens. The rise of mobile experiences such as Rovio Entertainment's "Angry Birds Space" and Disney's "Where's My Water" has introduced a whole new audience to gaming.

Here are five games worth checking out when they hit mobile devices later this year.

Demons' Score THD
Developer iNiS continues to explore new mobile ground with truly unique interactive experiences with its latest offering, "Demons' Score." In the rhythm action shooter, players will take control of Serenity, a college girl who can be possessed by various demons. With the ability to fly through levels, players will shoot at various creatures to the tune of original music. It's an interesting blend of genres that serves up short bursts of addictive fun.

The Amazing Spider-Man
Gamers will be able to swing into action this summer as Spider-Man in the first open world mobile game. Although it's licensed from the Sony Pictures 3-D movie, developer Gameloft has crafted a solid follow-up to "Ultimate Spider-Man: Total Mayhem," which also is worth checking out. Fans of the PlayStation 2 "Spider-Man 2" game will see how far mobile has come as they seamlessly maneuver Spidey through the city, battling supervillains and thugs along the way.

Dead Trigger
Madfinger Games turns its attention to horror with a first-person shooter perspective. After a virus has turned the world into zombies, the only way to survive is with bullets. From its spectacular environments to its frenetic action pace, gamers will be coming back for more undead fun while on the go.

Reign of Amira
Snapdragon has developed this third-person perspective fantasy action game for Android to showcase its Snapdragon S4 Pro processor. The game puts players in control of the sexy boots of Princess Amira, who's out to hack and slash her way through enemies to retain the lost glory of the Desert Kingdom. The free game plays like a console arcade experience.

Infinity Blade: Dungeons
From Epic Games, the latest installment in the iOS "Infinity Blade" franchise is a combination dungeon crawl and fantasy action game. With an overhead perspective that will be familiar to "Diablo III" fans, players seek revenge on the deathless by learning how to build an Infinity Blade. Along the way there are dozens of different enemies to kill with simple touch controls and a deep customization offering.

Janina Gavankar

'True Blood' star shifts between projects

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

■ cwagner@tribune.com
■ @showpatrol

It's not difficult to understand how Janina Gavankar, as Luna Garza in "True Blood," managed to steal Sam Merlotte's heart. When the Joliet native talks about the romance between the shapeshifters—shifters because they can switch from human to any animal with ease—she gets even more spirited.

"Oh I'd love to see them be together forever," she gushed during a recent phone interview. "I love Sam and Luna together. She has the only guy who understands her. And she's totally down for him."

Alas, that may not happen anytime soon. As the HBO hit bites into its fifth season Sunday night, Luna and Sam (Sam Trammell) face an angry pack of werewolves hunting the killer of Luna's ex, scary wolf Marcus (Daniel Buran). That situation leads to their first big fight, she said, but those aren't the only troubles lurking for the couple.

"It's a tough year to be a shifter," said Gavankar, 28. "They're up against a lot this year. It's tough to stay alive this year, so they have to really fight for their lives."

Gavankar, who attended the University of Illinois-Chicago (and did RedEye's Sudoku puzzle every day) before heading to Hollywood, didn't want to give away too much of Luna's story, but said we'll see more of her shapeshifter support group who met and talked about their emotions last season. This year, it seems, the shifters may not be talking.

"The shifters definitely show a darker side

True Blood
8 p.m. Sunday, HBO

of themselves this year, a stronger side," Gavankar said. "When you're a shifter and you lose control of yourself, it's dangerous for you and those around you. This is the year when Luna's not able to control herself."

As Luna, Gavankar may switch from human to animal, but the actress herself easily shifts between artistic pursuits—from drama to comedy to music. She's recording her first EP with producer Randy Jackson that she hopes to release later this summer.

Music always has been part of Gavankar's life. The classically trained pianist and percussionist may have majored in theater at UIC and paid her way through college by acting in commercials, but she minored in music (and psychology) and her girl group, Endera, was signed to Cash Money-Universal Records.

She recently put her own spin on Kanye West's "Love Lockdown," creating what she called an "anti-cover" of the song.

"I took it and I made it basically unrecognizable," she said, adding that she might have a few anti-covers on the EP along with original songs. "I would say that [my music is] like a cross between Imogen Heap, Sade and Sheila E. That's what it's turning out to be."

But before the record release, she has to wrap up production on "True Blood," which won't end for a little more than a month. And she's eager to learn if Luna survives.

"I don't know yet! We're only just filming Episode 12," she said. "I was like that last year, too, 'Do I make it?' You never ask though, you know? Even though you're wondering, 'Oh God, what's going to happen?'"

'Housewives' hit Chicago for 'magical' wedding

By Georgia Garvey

REDEYE

There have been plenty of tears shed on "The Real Housewives of New Jersey," but any crying in Sunday's episode—in which housewife Caroline Manzo's brother Jaime Laurita weds Rich Lane, his partner of 14 years, in Chicago—is 100 percent happy. Differences among the cast members, especially between Manzo and Teresa Guidice, were set aside.

"I would've rather had a knock-down drag-out in the middle of the airport than have it at my brother's wedding on his special day," Manzo said. "It wasn't going to happen."

Laurita called the ceremony, held at the couple's northwest suburban home, "magical." He said after Illinois legalized civil unions for same-sex couples last year, he and Lane immediately knew they would take the plunge. Four weeks later, they were trading vows in an emotional episode taped for the reality program. His sister delivered a heartfelt and moving speech.

"I really thought, at that moment, I'm really proud of her," said Laurita, a chef, party planner and designer to stars including Madonna and Sting. "I'm proud of us. And I'm proud of me."

Lane, who still gets emotional recalling the day, said he loves that viewers are "going to see our love."

Sunday ends a two-episode arc on the Bravo show in which Manzo; her brother Chris Laurita and his wife; and Guidice and her husband, Joe, travel to Chicago for the wedding. Along the way, there is—of course—drama. In last week's episode, Joe Guidice made a joke about a gay cast member. Manzo and Laurita defended Guidice's remark as not intended to be offensive.

"There is absolutely no malice there," Laurita said. Manzo agreed that Guidice, who's been accused in the past of homophobia, meant no harm.

"Clearly over the years, there have been remarks made. There is some sort of phobia there, there's no denying that," she said. "But that particular moment, that joke, that bad joke, to me was just a poor attempt at bad humor."

There continues to be no love lost between Manzo and Teresa Guidice, though, something that's clear during the Chicago trip. Manzo said she was particularly angry that Teresa Guidice chose the wedding reception to announce that her book had hit the best-sellers list.

"Be on the best-seller list a thousand times over, it doesn't affect my life. Good for you," Manzo said. "But you know what? It's my brother's day and the thing is, everything can't be about you in this world. Give people their moment, give people their time."

Manzo said there's no back story behind her sister Dina Manzo's absence from the wedding, pointing out that only two of Laurita's 10 siblings were able to make the event on short notice.

"This wedding was planned in four weeks' time," she said, pointing out that Dina Manzo had work, other relatives couldn't afford to take the trip and some had previous obligations. "Don't read too much into it."

5 questions for chef Gary Walker

The ousted “Around the World in 80 Plates” chef looks back on his travels

By Lisa Arnett

REDEYE

One of three chefs with Chicago ties on Bravo’s “Around the World in 80 Plates” reached the end of the road Wednesday night.

On a show of big personalities, travel agent-turned-chef Gary Walker proved himself a reliable supplier of one-liners and a steady source of entertainment for fans. The ladies of the Kappa Phi Delta sorority house at Illinois Institute of Technology, where Walker worked as a chef before filming the show, even got a shout-out when he chugged beer during a pub crawl challenge on the show’s first episode, filmed in London. Walker talked about his experiences on the show Thursday.

Three of the first five shows took place in countries—France, Spain and Italy—where most of the chefs didn’t speak the language and you did. How’d you feel about putting your skills to the test?

I’m a Francophile, number one, and when I was studying French in college, one of the requirements was that you had to study another language for a year. So I chose Italian. I’ve always felt comfortable with foreign languages and had a talent or a gift for it. And going into cooking, you start learning Spanish. I felt pretty wonderful about going to Europe [on the show]. In all three countries, those languages helped me dearly. I made my mother proud and I’m sure I made my French professor proud, too.

Where did you wish you would have traveled with the cast?

I’ve never traveled to Asia. Even during my 10 years plus in the travel business, it was always Europe-focused, so I really was interested and looking forward to going to Asia [on the show]. That part would definitely be like, whomp-whomp. I didn’t get the chance to go, but this will certainly be a vehicle for me to go there ... so I’m excited for the future.

What has it been like watching yourself on TV?

It’s very suspenseful. Everyone watching [with me] is just like, “Oh my God, what’s happening?” I have to wear a hoodie so I can pull it halfway over my head ... so I just don’t jump out of my skin!

SPOILER
ALERT!

Gary Walker
BRAVO

How did you feel during elimination?

For me, it was obviously a bit of a surprise to hear my name being called ... you’re very disappointed and a little hurt, but it’s a competition and you sign up for the good and the bad. In my mind, I’m like, “Well, if I have to go home, then I’ll go out with grace and style.”

When we talked to you before the show aired, you had moved from Chicago to L.A. What are you up to now?

I just did a dinner with Clara [Moore] and Nick [Lacasse] from the show in St. Louis. ... I am going to [my hometown] Detroit next weekend; I am going to do my own pop-up dinner in Detroit. And when I get to Colorado [to cook for a client in July and August], I’m doing a pop-up dinner with [fellow cast member] Jenna [Johansen] ... and basically after Sept. 1, I’m a free agent. I may go back to L.A., I may come back to Chicago, or who knows, I may be calling you from France talking to you about my next adventure.

Falling Skies: The Complete First Season

The cable series, based on an idea by writer Robert Rodat and producer Steven Spielberg, is about the chaotic aftermath of an alien attack that has left most of the world in ruins. Pockets of survivors band together to wage guerrilla warfare against the invaders and to fight for survival. Noah Wyle ("ER"), Moon Bloodgood ("Terminator Salvation"), Will Patton ("Armageddon") and Drew Roy ("Secretariat") make this offering both a strong sci-fi tale and family drama. Season 2 begins June 17 on TNT. Extras: Making-of featurettes (like animating a "skitter"), Comic-Con panel, commentaries, plus UltraViolet digital copy; Blu-ray adds trading card and a featurette comparing "Skies" comic book. RICK BENTLEY, THE FRESNO BEE

John Carter

An Earthling ends up in the middle of a war on Mars. The script by Andrew Stanton, Mark Andrews and Michael Chabon mixes pieces of several Edgar Rice Burroughs books in such an awkward way that the movie neither spotlights the planet's battle nor the Earthling's adventures. This story should have been a cosmic tale of good vs. evil, but the script keeps getting bogged down by convoluted explanations and a wedding plot line that's as dusty as the Martian surface.

Extras: A making-of piece, audio commentary, deleted scenes and bloopers. RICK BENTLEY, THE FRESNO BEE

Breaking Bad: Season 4

Drug kingpin Giancarlo Esposito goes up in smoke in this ever-more-stunning series, starring Emmy winner Bryan Cranston as a family-man teacher turned gangland meth mastermind. (AMC's fifth season starts July 15.)

Extras: Uncensored content, extended scenes, commentaries, making-of featurettes (including a half-hour on the explosive finale), with the Blu-ray adding relaxed video podcast reflections from key crew and cast on all episodes. DIANE WERTS, NEWSDAY

BROADWAY'S new stars

The scoop on 6 coming-soon spots on East Lakeview's main drag

By Erin Gibbons | FOR REDEYE

In April, Dale Levitski's French bistro Frog N Snail opened at 3124 N. Broadway. In May, quick-serve Brazilian Bowl (3204 N. Broadway) opened its doors, followed by Troy Mediterranean Grill (2908 N. Broadway). Now a slew of new restaurants have plans to join the reinvigorated dining scene on North Broadway in Lakeview, a stretch that has been ruled by fast-casual spots and bars in recent years.

"Every neighborhood has its moment," said Pastoral Artisan Cheese, Bread & Wine co-founder Greg O'Neill, who's opening a neighborhood bistro with partner Ken Miller adjacent to the existing retail store. "There was a time when everything seemed to be opening in Andersonville, and everything seemed to be opening in Lincoln Square. ... I think this just feels, in many ways, like Lakeview East's moment." Here's a look at what's due to debut in the coming months. REDEYE@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYETCHICAGO

WHAT ABOUT CHUY?

"Top Chef: Texas" contestant and former Chilam Balam chef Chuy Valencia told us in April he was hoping to open a new cafeteria-inspired restaurant on Broadway. He's since opened up his search for a space, but, he said, "I still dig Lakeview the most."

Phoebe's Bakery

3351 N. Broadway

Gourmet cupcake and pastry shop Phoebe's Cupcakes is moving half a block north to another storefront on Broadway and expanding to include breakfast, lunch and dinner under the new name Phoebe's Bakery. Expect coffee and espresso drinks, breakfast panini and pastries in the morning, and soups as well as seven grilled cheese sandwiches and a make-your-own option for lunch and dinner. Cupcakes will remain the signature dessert, but we hear the cinnamon rolls are giving them a run for their money. Construction on the new bakery is complete and will open pending approvals from the city.

ETA: Any day now

Senza 2875 N. Broadway

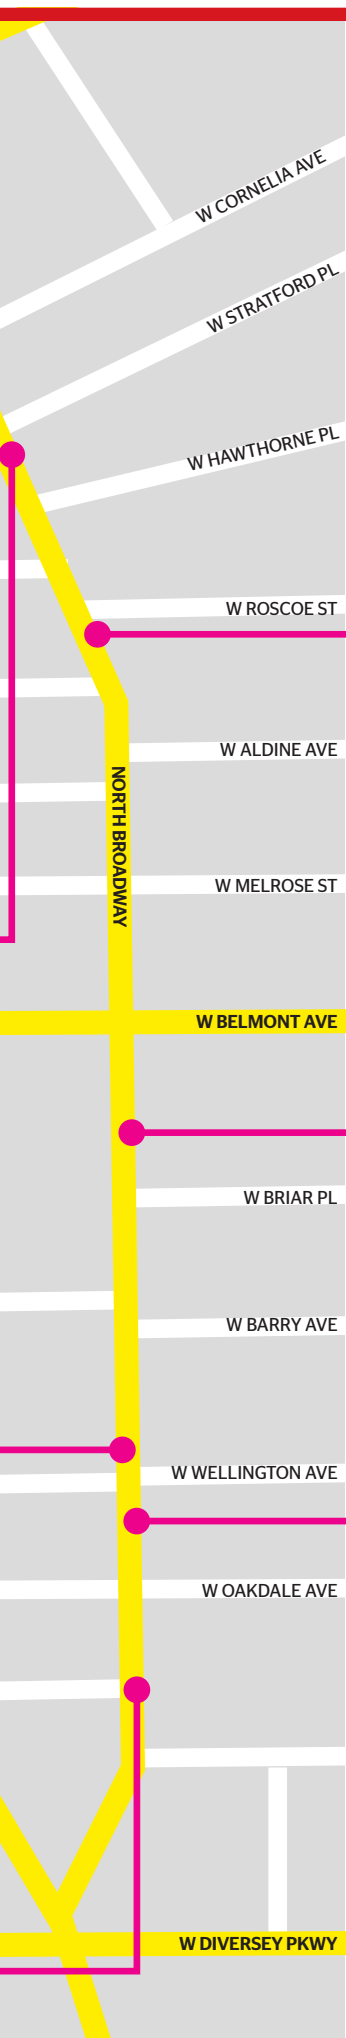

Senza's philosophy is "surprisingly gluten-free," and executive chef Noah Sandoval says that pretty much sums it up; while the menu will be 100 percent gluten-free, if customers can't tell, all the better. It'll have a coffeehouse-like atmosphere during the day, with grab-and-go breakfast and lunch options such as bagel sandwiches and sides of mac 'n' cheese and chips. In the evening, the menu shifts to composed dishes: Think duck egg ravioli and grilled Caesar salad with a big gluten-free crouton. There won't be a sit-down bar, but cocktails, wine and gluten-free beer will be served.

ETA: Third week of July

Bar Pastoral 2947 N. Broadway

An evolution of Pastoral's retail shops, Bar Pastoral will feature "a little bit of this, a little bit of that," according to co-owner Greg O'Neill: hot and cold plates, cheese and charcuterie, craft beers on tap, specialty cocktails and wines cherry-picked from the store's three locations and online stock. Expect table service in the evenings and weekends and counter service on weekdays until late afternoon. ETA: Fall

Revolution Mexican Steakhouse

3443 N. Broadway

Antonio Estrada, the owner of Lakeview standbys El Mariachi and Tutto Fresco, must have a thing for Broadway; he's opening his third concept—this one a Mexican steakhouse—on the same street. The three-level space will include an outdoor patio, full bar and private party area, and the meat-focused menu (New York strip, rib-eye, skirt steak, carnitas) promises new spins on Mexican classics.

ETA: Mid-July

Dryhop Brewers

3155 N. Broadway

This brewpub will feature a rotating selection of beers brewed in house and a seasonally driven menu of shared plates to pair with them (not the other way around). The brewing process will be front and center; beer will be poured straight from stainless-steel serving tanks behind the bar and the brewhouse will be adjacent to the dining room.

ETA: Winter

Bow Truss Coffee Roasters

2934 N. Broadway

Named for the building's arched bow truss ceilings, this latest venture by Phillip Tadros (Dollop, Kickstand Espresso Bar) will be half cozy neighborhood coffee shop and half roasting house, with a focus on educating customers about each coffee and where it comes from.

ETA: June 24, to coincide with the Chicago Pride Parade

FEST FRIDAYS

2011 Ribfest Chicago
REDEYE FILE

Meat overload

By Emily Van Zandt | REDEYE

Nobody counts calories during fest season. At least, we don't. There's just too much fried goodness. If you're really looking for an adventure in eating, be sure to hit Ribfest Chicago in North Center this weekend. We hear there'll be fried Twinkies ... and fried root beer? Don't ask. Just order and report back. EVANZANDT@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDRINKS

RIBFEST CHICAGO

Time: 5-10 p.m. Friday, noon-10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday

Location: The intersection of Lincoln Avenue, Irving Park Road and Damen Avenue in North Center

Cost: $5 suggested donation
It's the wrong weekend to start a diet: It may be called "Ribfest," but there are plenty of other dishes to wreck your daily calorie counts, including pulled pork, kebobs, truffle fries, turkey legs, mac 'n' cheese, funnel cake, ice cream, kettle corn and hot dogs. Drooling yet? Us too. Restaurants selling their snacks include Big Bricks, Chicago BBQ Company, Byron's Hot Dogs, Real Urban Barbecue, Smoke Daddy and more.

But there's more to do than eat: If you can stop licking the sauce from your fingers long enough to stake out a good spot, there's plenty of music to check out, including Saturday's North Stage headlining band Megafaun, which plays at 9 p.m. Headliners Heartless Bastards take the South Stage at 9 p.m. Sunday.

MORE FESTING

Andersonville Midsommarfest

Time: 5-10 p.m. Friday, 11 a.m.-10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday
Location: Clark Street and Foster Avenue in Andersonville
Cost: $5 suggested donation
For more than 45 years, crowds have headed to this northern neighborhood for a weekend of music, dancing, food and, of course, beer.

Chicago Blues Fest

Time: 11 a.m.-9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 11 a.m.-9 p.m. Sunday
Location: Grant Park
Cost: Free
Musicians will spread out over five stages. Head to explorechicago.org for a full lineup.

Wells Street Art Fest

Time: 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday
Cost: $7 suggested donation
Location: North Wells Street between North Avenue and Division Street
While browsing art is the main attraction here, there's plenty of live music (including cover bands Trippin Billies and American English), food and more.

Old Town Art Fair

Time: 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Saturday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Sunday
Location: Lincoln Avenue and Wisconsin Street
Cost: $7 suggested donation
Now in its 63rd year, this art-focused fest includes showings from more than 250 artists from all over the U.S.

UPCOMING FESTIVALS

'Idol' winner has surgery

The Wrap

Phillip Phillips has gone under the knife—and he's ready to hit the road.

The "American Idol" winner is recovering from surgery to remove kidney stones and will be ready to join his cohorts next month when the American Idol LIVE! tour kicks off.

"Surgery went well, he's resting and will be ready for the Idol tour kick off on July 6," said Leslie Fradkin of 19 Entertainment, which produces "American Idol."

According to TMZ, Phillips underwent the surgery Wednesday in L.A., enduring a 6 1/2-hour procedure to remove kidney stones that were too big to pass naturally.

The surgery is a long time coming; Phillips' condition plagued him during his run on "Idol." He received emergency medical treatment in early March after complaining of severe abdominal pain, and after the "Idol" finale in late May, his father revealed that he had undergone eight surgeries during his run on the show.

"I've been sick this whole show," the singer himself revealed via a call-in to "Live With Kelly."

TMZ reports that Phillips was scheduled to undergo the surgery last week but was forced to postpone due to a fever and sinus infection.

Phillips

The American Idol LIVE! tour kicks off July 6 at the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit and on July 7 comes to Allstate Arena in Rosemont.

Finally. 'Showgirls the musical'

By Melanie Zanona

FOR REDEYE

It's a tale as old as time: a small-town girl tries to get famous in the big city.

Chicagoans John-Ryan Griggs and Chad Comer know the story well—not only because it's the plot of their favorite rags-to-riches stripper film, "Showgirls," but also because they too are trying to strike it big in Chicago with the production of their "Showgirls the Musical."

"It started as a joke to make it into a musical, but we kind of just kept going with it," said Griggs, a Ukrainian Village resident. "The next week at a bar, we went from a casual conversation to scribbling complicated sets on napkins."

Neither man has direct experience in producing theater—Griggs is an art director and Comer is an event planner—but both are die-hard fans of the cult-classic film.

"Showgirls," which starred a post-"Saved by the Bell" Elizabeth Berkley lap-dancing her way to Vegas fame, is a favorite of the duo's.

"['Showgirls'] has such a cult following, not just in the gay community, but for lovers of bad film everywhere," Griggs said. "People are either going to hate it or love it. We're just targeting the latter."

To finance the project, the duo launched a Kickstarter fund, which enables people to back the project through online donations. They need to raise $2,500 by the end of June to continue the project. For more details or to make a donation, go to kickstarter.com.

Turns out the Muppets have some pretty great taste in music

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

It's been months since "The Muppets" won an Oscar for best song, but one can assume they've been pretty busy since then. Which might explain why the London Telegraph is just getting around to interviewing Kermit, Miss Piggy and the gang about their musical preferences. We followed the trail from Muppets to men (and women) to see how some of today's hottest musical acts are connected. DMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

"Right now, my current fave is, of course, Adele! Beauty, talent, a natural singer—she reminds me of Moi!"

"[Beyoncé has] been a huge and constant part of my life as an artist since I was about 10 or 11. I love how all of her songs are about empowerment. Even when she's married and Jay-Z put a ring on it, she releases 'Single Ladies.' Go get yours. Go get what you deserve. I think she's really inspiring."

"[Diana Ross and Tina Turner] were fearless and are icons. They are great performers with amazing style and beauty. As black women they both rose above adversity and showed the world how truly strong they are."

"Kid Cudi is my favorite artist. If I could make music like someone, I'd like to make music like him. I like that emotion, really heartfelt."

"I'd love to work with Skrillex, even though I've never heard his music. (We don't get electronic music in the swamp. There's something about electricity and water [that] just doesn't mix.)"

"The Kanye West record ['My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy'] is absolutely brilliant. It really deserves all of the hype and credibility it's been given. I love everything he does."

Wardrobe malfunction

Kim Kardashian had a close call Wednesday before going onstage on "Jimmy Kimmel Live!" when her dress split down the back. Kardashian posted a picture of the split to Instagram with the message: "About to do Jimmy Kimmel & my whole dress rips! Help!!! Time to sew me in...praying this works." Long story short: It did.

The 'D' is silent

Prepare yourself for an action-packed holiday movie season. Trailers for "Les Misérables" and "The Great Gatsby" recently premiered, and Quentin Tarantino's "Django Unchained" added itself to the list late Wednesday. Our first glimpse shows slave Jamie Foxx helping bounty hunter Christoph Waltz in exchange for his freedom, and Leonardo DiCaprio smoking from a reeeeeally long cigarette holder AND drinking some manner of tropical beverage from a giant coconut. Blood splatter also is included—this is a Tarantino flick, after all.

THE DIGIT $250

That's how much 1990s Nickelodeon star Lori Beth Denberg from "All That" charged per hour for a one-line (and a hand fart) cameo as drug dealer Rumer Willis' celebrity client on this week's episode of "Workaholics," as reported on the show's Tumblr.

“Man, these things have never tasted so good.”

—Nick Cannon, to people.com, on his recent reaction to eating salt 'n' vinegar chips. Cannon has been on a strict diet after a series of health crises.

How romantic?

Twitter was a hit—literally—for Wiz Khalifa and Amber Rose. Rose told Us mag: "TWiz" did an interview about me and the guy who interviewed him asked, 'If there was one girl in the world who would you be with?' He said 'Amber Rose'—and then I hit him on Twitter."

That's how many CMT Music Awards Carrie Underwood added to her collection (for video of the year and collaborative video of the year with Brad Paisley) on Wednesday. Other big winners: Luke Bryan (male video of the year), Lady Antebellum (group video of the year) and Miranda Lambert (female video of the year).
